CONCEPTUAL CONSULTATION (RSA 676:4,11(a) AND (c)): The conceptual consultation phase provides an opportunity for a property owner or agent to discuss with the planning board, in very general terms, the types of uses that may be suitable for the subject property. Although this discussion must take place at a public meeting of the planning board, notification of abutters and the general public is not required because the discussion is informal, and no plans or specific details are presented.

Intent:
To build a house with attached garage, and a ground floor ADU that also has an attached garage. The current plan is that the foundation for the entire structure would be laid (House, House Garage, ADU and ADU Garage). For cost related reasons, the ADU and it's garage would be built first and and the foundation section for house and its garage would be capped. Once finances allow, a new construction loan would be acquired and the House and the House garage would then be built.
